The veranda, especially the one in the rear, should be built with the thought that it is frequently to be used as a playroom for children and as an airing place for babies. It should be so arranged that the child can be left with safety while the mother performs the household duties. Sometimes the floor of the veranda is laid with a-inch crack between the boards, chiefly for the purpose of shedding water. Such a floor is uncomfortable to walk upon, especially for children with bare feet, and money or trinkets may be dropped through the cracks. A better method is to put in a tight floor with a pitch of one-fourth inch per foot. The boards of the floor should be laid perpendicular to the side of the house so that if they warp up at the edges the channels formed will be in the direction of the flow. The floor should be made of quarter-sawed wood so that it will not sliver. The level of the veranda floor should be a few inches below the level of the main floors of the house. BALUSTRADE OF VERANDA. The railing or balustrade should be designed with a view to simplicity, safety, and, above all, durability. It must be kept in mind that the balustrade may be frequently used as a footrest or seat. The top and bottom rails should be beveled to shed water and the bottom rail should be a...
