Excerpt: .should be allowed to hazard the general good. The influence of the central authorities, as evidenced by the continuation school program, is cast on the side of the general good. They do not recognize the short, intensive course as being the equivalent of the longer continuation school course. CHAPTER IV LOWER COMMERCIAL SCHOOLS (3) MUNICH COMMERCIAL CONTINUATION SCHOOL Lower commercial schools in the other German states present such a variety of conditions as to render any attempt at generalization difficult indeed. utsi e Each Of the twelve states where a compul-Prussia. J sory attendance law is universally in operation regulates its own school affairs, and is not at all subservient to the example set by Prussia. On the whole, then, it seems better to devote some attention to describing the conditions that prevail in the Munich school, which may be taken as typical of one of the better South German commercial continuation schools, and so of all to be found in the empire. The content of courses and the methods of instruction may be somewhat cursorily treated, for much of what has already been said of Prussia will apply with equal force to conditions there. This Munich school has a home of its own, overlooking the main market-place of the city. The building, now old and considerably out of date (it has been in use for over forty years), is not well adapted to school purposes, but the authorities are looking forward to a...
