Zentaro Kawase, professor of forestry at the imperial university of Tokio, Japan, has been making a tour of the national forests of this country to learn the government's methods of selling timber and of reforestation. WHILE many citizens in Minnesota have been wondering whether reforestation was possible in Northern Minnesota, forest experts employed by the state forest service, the forestry school of the university and the government have been busy planting hundreds of thousands of trees. The planting of 160,000 trees, for example has just been completed in Burntside state forest, under the direction of the state forest service. On the north side of Burntside lake and west of Crab lake, on rough, rocky, purely non-agricultural land, these trees have been planted. The tracts for planting had to be carefully selected. In some cases,...
