Fred Kahn was born in Wiesbaden, Germany shortly before Hitler came to power. His parents left Germany to escape the Nazis but felt traveling with a newborn would have put them at risk. They left their baby with his childless Aunt Rosa and Uncle Siegfried. They presumed that Hitler and the Nazis would not stay in power long. This was not the case. His aunt and uncle became like parents and he lived with them for six years. A synagogue which had been built in the 1800 s was next to my aunt and uncle s house in Wehen. My uncle was responsible for it. He and his cousin transported pine boxes in a horse-drawn carriage. I was told they contained the shul s [synagogue s] religious relics. I watched as they buried the boxes in a nearby landfill. The synagogue was burnt down six weeks later, on Kristallnacht. By premonition, it seems, the relics had escaped the sacrilegious desecration by fire. When Fred s parents heard the news that Germany was going to war, they called Siegfried with this message: Get the boy out of Germany. The next night Fred s uncle woke six-year-old Fred and told him to put on his best suit. A brave Christian woman named Maria Goar would take him to his parents in Belgium. At that time, there was a no man s land between Germany and Belgium. Fred s father stood on the Belgian side, imploring the guards to let the young boy cross, saying, C est mon fils! (French for That s my son! ). Freddy was finally permitted to cross the border to a father he...
