We give a sort of catalogue raisonn e, of such as have been recently received, dismissing a score or more of volumes in as many paragraphs. 1. Reginald Hastings: a Tale of the Troubles in 164-. By Eliot Warburton, Esq. New-York: Harper Brothers. 1850. The author of this romance is favourably known to us as the writer of a couple of books of travels, one in the East, entitled The Crescent and the Cross; the other in the extreme West, and entitled Hochelaga. More recently, he has given us a work of history--the Conquest of Canada --which we notice elsewhere, --and now he suddenly appears in the field of fiction. The-tory of Reginald Hastings, however, will scarcely secure for him a rank so respectable in fiction as that which lie has acquired as a describer of strange countries. The period chosen for the action of this story is that of the great struggle of the first Charles with the Roundheads. As a gallery of portraits, will be found the chief merit of this performance; and we may concede, as a next merit, a very lively and correct description of the condition of the country and of society during the troubles of that memorable contest. But, as a work of art, according to a standard much more difficult and high, the performance before us falls very far short of the previous writings of our author. The story possesses but little interest; the action...
